

ENDOWMENT FUNDS

THE GEORGE WASHINGTON UNIVERSITY
WASHINGTON DC

The George Washington University's Endowment is made up of more than 1,100 individual endowments, most of which are designated to provide perpetual financial support for scholarship, professorships, academic and research programs, libraries, and other endowed programs. More than 60% of the Endowment benefits the University as a whole, with the remainder earmarked for individual schools.

Those who have provided gifts to the endowment of The George Washington University are forever a part of its history and its tradition of continuing service to society. Individual endowments represent the legacy of benevolent donors who invest for long-term growth. Their permanent legacies generate funding that influences current and future generations. Endowments make it possible year after year to attract the best faculty, students, and research to GW.

The following list includes representative philanthropic endowment funds of The George Washington University as of June 30, 2009.
